“Evin's personality is a unique combination of creativity with structured, analytical thinking. While he knows instinctively the importance of details and is thus something of a perfectionist, that does not keep him from being innovative or from looking at issues from different perspectives. Over the years, I've come to assume that while both traits are important in a marketing role, rarely do you find them in a single employee. That is happily not the case with Evin. He has the right combination of traits to truly excel in a marketing career.

I've also observed Evin to be a very hard worker, dedicated and dependable. And he is a kind and friendly person, thriving in team environments. I highly recommend Evin, and he would be a valuable asset to any organization.”

“I had the pleasure of being directed by Evin in a production of See How They Run at the Cannon Theatre in Littleton MA. This was just my second time on stage and Evin's direction was clear, helpful and always given in a spirit and tone which could only interpret as encouraging and positive. I would, without hesitation, work with Evin again in the future.”
